FATHER'S DAY

"Dignity attaches to the word 'Father,' in whose honor today is set apart.

It is a venerable word, carrying the thought of solidity and steadiness—a refuge to which one can turn in hours of uncertainty and distress with the assurance that appeal will not be made in vain.

EVOLUTIONARY

The history of "father" has been evolutionary. Once he was looked upon almost solely in the light of a provider—a sort of necessary evil to be endured and tolerated. In large measure, the responsibility for this attitude rests with him. Gradually a change in viewpoint has been effected until today he is beginning to occupy an entirely different position.

The stern, austere, disciplinary parent has been succeeded by a boy—older in years, it is true—but with a rejuvenated heart which can sympathetically and understandingly put himself on the same plane as his children and become one of them.

The great trouble, it seems, as the years creep on us and the hair shows a tinge of grey, is to forget our own period of youth and its really momentous problems and to pass judgment with cold impartiality. We are prone to forget our own sins of omission and commission when we were young and resort to the use of the measuring rod of maturity.

TURNING CLOCK BACK

Wise, indeed, therefore, the father who can project himself back through the years and be a boy again in every sense that the word implies—its thoughts, ambitions, mis-steps, and gropings through the mental inkiness which are part and parcel of adolescence.

WELCOME CHANGE

Fathers have become more human in their attitude and thinking these days. Instead of a person, respected through fear, they have become companions and pals of their offspring. This change is markedly denoted today through the common use of the word "Dad," an appellation of affection and out-

CITY UNDER CONTROL OF GUARDSMEN

OMAHA, Neb., June 15.—UP—The National Guard took over Omaha tonight to prevent further bloodshed in the violent trolley strike.

Walter H. Jurgensen, acting governor, declared Omaha under martial law and ordered 1,700 troops into the city.

The first companies rolled into South Omaha's packing house district, scene of two pitched battles in two nights. They were under command of Adj. Gen. H. J. Paul, who ordered officers to station their men at strategic places. The soldiers, members of companies not resident in Omaha, converged on the city in motor lorries, fully equipped with side arms and rifles. Machine gun companies also have been ordered out and were expected to take up positions later.

Jurgensen acted only after Governor Roy Cochran telephoned him from Biloxi, Mississippi, and told him to use his own discretion. Previously Jurgensen had refused pleas of Mayor Roy N. Towl and Sheriff John Hopkins for troops.

The demand that soldiers take over the peace task became imperative after Friday night's riot in which one man was killed, two wounded seriously and more than a score hurt. Troops were ordered to take up positions later.

RETURN HOP TO BE MADE ON MONDAY

SAND ISLAND, Midway Islands, June 15.—UP—The signatures of America's first two mid-Pacific air passengers were written in a logbook at the world's first mid-ocean commercial aviation base today when Pan American Airways' giant Clipper ship landed here.

The signers were C. W. Winter, Pan-American radio engineer and Phillip Beatty, national maintenance supervisor both from Honolulu.

They were passengers on the huge monoplane which landed with the speed of a big ferry zull navigating non-stop for the first time in history over the unexplored air lanes between Hawaii and this group of islands in the middle of the Pacific.

Nine hours and 13 minutes after they left Pearl Harbor, the Clipper's two passengers and crew of six men were splitting water of their landing gear here.

RETURNS MONDAY. The distance was about 1,666 miles.

Capt. Edwin C. Musick said the return flight to Honolulu probably would be undertaken Monday.

"It was a fine dash," he said. "There was no incident to report, although the seascape was beautiful."

PERFECT WEATHER

The Clipper's captain said there had been perfect with the exception of some cloudiness which enabled a complete examination of the crew's project map covering 200,000 square miles of mid-ocean of which little has been known heretofore.

Moderate trade winds helped the Clipper's speed which averaged 165 miles an hour. The entire flight was flown under 1,500 feet altitude.

A tour of the island was a banquet at which the crew was served, occupied the visit and the island's inhabitants tonight.

Solons Speed Up Work To Bring Session To End

SACRAMENTO, June 15.—UP—Merriment and playfulness prevailed in the legislature tonight as members of both houses speeded through bills remaining on the calendar and aimed at adjournment by Monday at the latest.

With nearly all important controversial measures either passed, killed, tabled or tied up in committee, there were few remaining measures which were expected to precipitate lengthy debate.

Legislators saw the end approaching. The Epic bloc in the assembly realized it was hopeless to attempt delaying the program any further and for the first time in 10 weeks of a hard-fought session there appeared to be a general desire for speed.

MAN IS FREED FOR DEATH OF HIS BROTHER

BAKERSFIELD, June 15.—UP—

The State of California today refused to prosecute Irvan F. Weedman, 28-year-old Kern county worker, who killed his brother in a climax to their feud over the affections of Irvan's pretty 18-year-old wife.

District Attorney Thomas Scott, declaring "evidence was insufficient to convict," issued the order, releasing Weedman from the county jail. He had been held since confessing that he fired three revolver bullets into his brother, Roy, 23, last week.

The shooting occurred at the home of the brothers' parents in Fellows, a small oil town. Roy died instantly.

Irvan told a coroner's jury that he married Leslie Laverne in Yuma, Ariz., a month ago. Ten days after the marriage and their return home, he testified, his wife left him to live with his brother.

Ignoring Irvan's warnings, police were informed. Roy returned to the home of their parents in Fellows. He came to get clothing he had left there. As he entered the room, his younger brother shot at him. Two bullets went wild but three were effective.

The youthful Mrs. Weedman, who fondled the fatally wounded man, later transferred her affection back to her husband, created a sensation with her purported comment on the slaying.

Sheriff's officers alleged she remarked: "Ain't it swell—a passion murder just like in the magazines."

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.—UP—Construction reached the half-way mark today on the $70,000,000 San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge, the biggest and longest.

Governor Frank P. Merriam started the spinning of cables in the sky-scraper suspension section between San Francisco and Yerba Buena island as 10,000 on-lookers cheered.

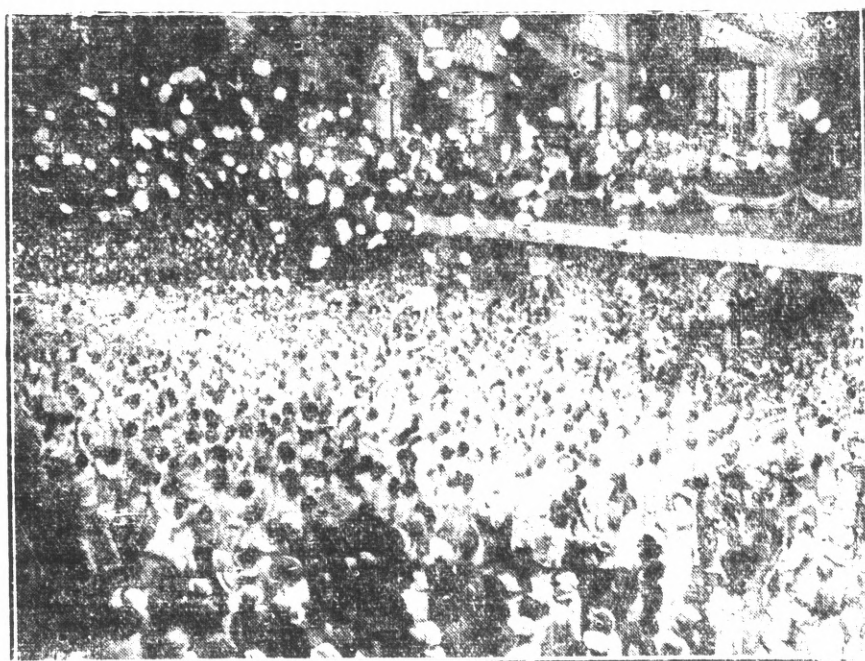

His hand sent two silvery strands of steel wire across the first mile of the long suspension span, along the route of the workers' catwalks that loop from pier to pier 450 feet above the water.

Steelwork on the catwalker which joins Yerba Buena and Oakland is almost touching and the flooring has been laid for most of the completed distance.

WILEY POST IS UNSUCCESSFUL ON STRATO HOP

WICHITA, June 15.—UP—Motor trouble today forced Wiley Post to abandon his last attempt to fly from coast to coast in the stratosphere.

Post, at his phone, the globe circling "Winnie Mae" down at the Wichita airport at 3:30 P. M., said he had given up as far as his "Winnie Mae" when he found that it would be impossible to complete the flight.

Post said he turned back to Wichita because he was thoroughly familiar with the field here and that he was fully confident he could make the difficult "skid" landing on it.

Post declined to comment on the possibility of another attempt to cross the continent in the stratosphere in an attempt to beat the record now held by Col. Roscoe Turner until instruments of the craft had been checked and the motor had been worked on.

UP TO PARLIAMENT

To climb out of the heavy flying suit he wore as protection against the extreme cold of the high altitude at which he piloted the plane.

"I had plenty of gas and oil to have completed the flight," Post said, "but the engine developed trouble and I thought I'd better set the plane down without attempting to reach New York."

He said he had gone as far East as "near Chicago" when he found that it would be impossible to complete the flight.

Post said he turned back to Wichita because he was thoroughly familiar with the field here and that he was fully confident he could make the difficult "skid" landing on it.

Post declined to comment on the possibility of another attempt to cross the continent in the stratosphere in an attempt to beat the record now held by Col. Roscoe Turner until instruments of the craft had been checked and the motor had been worked on.

BRITISH AND U. S. CONFER ON ATTITUDE

LONDON, June 15.—UP—

China's appeal to the world powers for protection against Japan's expansion in north China was regarded here as a sign as likely to cause a sterner attitude on the part of Britain and virtual admission of Chinese control of northern China.

It was revealed authoritatively that the British government has been in continual touch with the United States and other signatories of the nine-power treaty regarding Japan's action in northern China.

PROTECT CHINA

Under the nine power treaty, the United States, Great Britain, Japan, China, Italy, the Soviet Union, Portugal, Belgium and France bound themselves to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of China.

Japan has warned China that her invocation of the treaty would result in "serious consequences."

NOTE SENT

Reliable sources said the Chinese government has sent a note to Great Britain and the United States. In the case of the note to Britain, the United Press learned from a trustworthy British source that Quo Tai-Chi, Chinese ambassador, appended a remark virtually appealing not only to consultation but for action by the signatories to the treaty.

The fact that the appeal was in the form of an addendum and not a part of the body of the note presumably explains an official denial from Nanking that China had appealed to the powers.

REACHES LIMIT

The note was sent by Quo Tai-Chi, Chinese ambassador, to Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, by messenger Thursday. It implied full information about Japanese movements in north China from May 29 to June 11 and expounded the Nanking government's attitude.

The note said China had reached the limit of concessions to Japan and would refuse to comply with Japanese demands for signature to a document placing written seal on the "accommodations" which Japan is demanding.

The note said that although Premier Katsuko Okada told the Japanese cabinet on June 11 that the issues in north China had been settled, further Japanese demands followed.

The views of the British government on the question will be given to parliament on Monday when Hoare replies to questions.

F. D. R. Defeat Is Proclaimed By EPIC Chief

PASADENA, June 15.—UP—In a new book, "We, People of America, and How We Ended Poverty," released today, Upton Sinclair, socialist and defeated gubernatorial candidate in California, predicted President Franklin D. ## AMUSEMENT TO SUIT EVERY TASTE TODAY

A show for the whole family opens at the Fox Theater today with Shirley Temple back again in "Our Little Girl."

The fourth and all-new edition of "The March of Time," a modern Red Riding Hood, a cartoon, a Pete Smith Spotlight, and Fox Movie-tune News are also screening.

Shirley has an important dramatic role in "Our Little Girl," in which she is the means of reuniting her parents, Jack McLean, a young doctor devoted to making scientific experiments, and Rosemary Ames, his wife, who has become interested in another man.

The little girl disappears, and is found on the grounds where her father and mother have taken her for picnics.

There is a thrilling circus sequence, with "Foolies" Hammer, world-famed clown, and many other circus celebrities having important roles. J. Farrell MacDonald and Erin O'Brien Moore are others in the cast.

NEW YORK INSIDE OUT

By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, June 15.—When you're in New York, and don't own a car, there's still a way of getting around the city without a car.

The owner had written the date and the words "Ricky Ridge, N. Y." in red ink across the ticket. For years it had been cherished as a memento that might come some day mean times more than the original ticket spent to purchase it. But the depression apparently had brought it out of hiding, to be used after thirty-one years for lack of the price of a ride.

There are many who've had to do down in their stockings to keep moving the days.

TROOPS ENTER MEXICO CITY IN NEW CRISIS

MEXICO CITY, June 15.—UP.—The government moved various troops to Mexico City in view of the danger of internal strife created by the widening breach between President Lazaro Cardenas and former President Plutarco Elias Calles, the "strong man" of Mexico.

The War Department began moving troops into the city from outlying districts, the United Press learned.

Two troop trains from the states of Guerrero and Oaxaca arrived tonight and were gararrisoned in local barracks.

War department officials refused to comment on the troop movements, asserting everything is quiet and that there is no likelihood of trouble.

It was also learned reliably that troops under command of General Saturnino Cedillo, overlord of the State of San Luis Potosi, had marched with a detachment under Colonel Mendoza at Rayon, in San Luis Potosi.

The fight involved few men and was reported not to have been connected with the national political situation.

YOUR HEALTH

Ear Troubles Almost Always Begin From Outside Influences, Like Swimming

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

PLEASE write about "Otitis Media," begs a reader. Is it incurable? Will it cause cancer?

While it is not always curable, an inflammation of the middle ear is very frequently relieved by treatment. I never heard of it causing cancer, but anything is possible. It just isn't probable.

In this particular case, the trouble commenced with getting river water into the inner ear while swimming. This reminds me that this doctoring business goes seasonal like any other. The cycle just before us in this section is the annual sequence of accidents incurred in what most of you call "having a good time."

I am not inclined to be squeamish about sports, nor do I like them all messed up with a lot of "don'ts," but water sports are beginning to need some precautions. Many people come to regard a bathing suit as just legitimate underwear. They wear them throughout the season.

They are ready on a moment's notice to toss off an outer covering and plop into anything that looks like water. There are many reasons why they are courting danger. Perhaps shallow water is the first thing to think of. Such tragic results have come from diving into water where rocks and other litter are all too close to the surface.

May Be Too Cold

The pool or quarry may be spring fed and the water is entirely too cold for a sudden entrance. Chill, cramps, and heart shock are quite possible here.

There is always the danger of pollution. Somewhere, wherever a river flows, the people concerned refuse from dwellings and factories is discharged into the stream.

The natural water life, even when the stream is free from pollution, may be able to cause trouble. It is the wise person who carries rubber ear muffs to slip over these extended openings into the head and thus avoid what may be serious suffering and impairment later.

About forty percent of all deafness is acquired, rather than congenital. About one out of two or three cases of otitis media comes from a catarrhal condition, and this means that at some time there has been cause for inflammation.

The media or middle ear is the portion of the ear that conducts the sounds. It has an outer contrivance for collecting the sounds and an inner set of nerves and tiny bones that distribute them and make them intelligible. The inner ear has to be open to the airwaves and naturally it happens that sometimes water or foreign bodies will find their way inside.

Trouble Brought In

It is a comparatively rare thing for the inner ear to have a disease of its own. Troubles in that region are usually brought in through congestion and inflammation of the surrounding parts. When trouble brews behind the eardrums, that membrane bulges out and sometimes the suffering is extreme.

The drum must be punctured or otherwise it might burst from the congestion back of it. Opening the inner ear to the outside is not necessarily fatal to the ear, although many of you think it is. But, if it is forced to burst in order to relieve itself, the damage can be serious.

Any irritation of the hearing device should mean a visit to the specialist. A small amount of water, an insect, a mite of sand can do a lot of mischief. The mastoid process, the seat of the dreaded mastoiditis, is only a thin layer of fiber away from the middle ear. But don't worry, Mrs. R. S., about cancer in the ear.

Mr. J. N. An irritable bladder does not necessarily mean disabled or even affected kidneys. Have an urinalysis made. If possible have the inside of the bladder examined. Your physician probably has the necessary instruments. Many conditions of inflamed bladder can be cured, but we must first know what the condition is.

Short Cuts

It is well for the homemaker to keep in mind that there are other flavors besides vanilla for flavoring cakes. Any of the following extracts are worth considering when baking: Almond, orange, lemon, coffee, cinnamon, anise and rose.

If you wish smooth tops on quick breads, brush on a coat of melted butter or milk before baking, and again just before removing from the oven.

Guide to Charm

Business Girl Often Gets Edge in Looks

By JACQUELINE HUNT

WHY is it that the woman who spends her entire time in her home is seldom so well-cared for and attractive as her sister who goes to business? Actually she has more time to spend on her personal appearance than the business woman.

The trouble is that she spends too much time feeling sorry for herself instead of working out a system and applying business tactics to both her beauty routine and her housework. Snap out of it, homemakers, and see how good looking, sweet and sparkling you can become with a little intelligent effort.

Look into your mirror as soon as you get up in the morning. If your skin is not so good, it is usually at its worst at this time—pores relaxed and color sallow and dull. If your skin is reasonably normal, splash it with water that is as cold as it will run from the faucet. If your skin is oily, follow this cold water rinse with a patting of diluted witch hazel or astringent to bring up the color and reduce the most conspicuous pores.

Now, no matter how much of a hurry you are in, apply a bit of make-up. If you use a powder rouge—and we will admit that it is handy in the morning—apply it after you have dusted your skin with powder. It is less likely to clog the pores. If you do not like to use make-up before breakfast, then at least use a good lotion to take the shine from your skin and make it smooth and soft.

Breakfast over, what is next on your household schedule? Market? Then make it a point to look just as fresh and smart as your best friend does when she sets off for her office. Even though you wear a cotton house frock, see that your nose is powdered, your hair neatly arranged, your shoes polished and your dress freshly laundered. You will feel better and you will get better service. Then there is no cause for embarrassment if you meet your husband's boss' wife or the snooty neighbor across the street.

Next there is housework to be hurried through, but you needn't think of it as a chore, when it offers such a grand opportunity for exercises that keep your waistline firm and your limbs slender and graceful. Of course, you must go about your tasks properly. When you bend to pick up something from the floor or to dust around the baseboards, keep your knees stiff and bend only from the waistline. This strengthens the abdominal muscles and keeps your thighs slender.

When you make beds, stand in the middle of one side and twisting from the waistline, straighten your sheets and tuck them in. This keeps away that middle-aged roll of flesh about the waistline.

Gingham Flowers into Formality

By IRENE VAIL

New York—The old-fashioned gingham continues to hold its own; indeed, this season it has proved to be more popular than ever. The usual run of simple house dresses are, of course, much in evidence, but this year the designers have taken gingham into far fields by using the material for formal afternoon dresses, and even evening dresses. Grandma certainly would never have envisioned such a peculiar thing as a gingham evening gown, but then there are a lot of things Grandma would be amazed at now—that is, if she were not a modern Grandma.

The prints run all the way from geometrical figures to soft, flowered motifs that make one think of idyllic days in the old home town. I mean the old home town the way it was in the days before the war. Since small towns nowadays have access to styles through the newspapers, magazines and movies it is necessary for Paris itself to give heed to their wants.

Therefore, we find the gingham gowns retaining an outward semblance of their former simplicity, but with a flair in dress-making that didn't use to be there.

For example, sketched today at left is a plaid gingham dress in youthful style developed in plaid gingham with the fabric used on the bias for the bodice yoke and the front panel of the skirt. The gathered fullness of the bodice is interesting.

For women's sizes, a printed sheet muslin is adaptable with collar and cuffs of plain white voile.

Don't Forget the Bridesmaids

MODERN WOMEN

A Story of a Willing Wife Who Tried to Make a Pudding a la Cook Book

By MARIAN MAY'S MARTIN

MRS. JONES—that isn't her name, but it will do—wasn't much of a cook, but she was willing to learn, and being able to read and of a courageous nature was not dismayed at the idea of tackling anything the cook book suggested.

The day about which I am to tell you was a warmish one and Mrs. Jones was busier than usual, because she had guests arriving for a protracted week-end. What made matters more complicated was the fact that the visiting couple lived in a spic and span apartment and had the best of things to eat, which the natural-born cook who was Mrs. Smith made.

"But she doesn't make puddings," thought Mrs. Jones, "and I know her husband adores them—so goes mine—so I'll have a pudding—and just show her I can cook, too!"

It seemed a long, involved affair, that chosen recipe, but having tasted of it when in more affluent days there was a maid to stir it and to blame it on her if it didn't come up to expectation Mrs. Jones set forth valiantly to achieve what seemed to her the impossible.

"I'll just take my bath and dress," she thought, "there will be plenty of time for the pudding." But the order of procedure was wrong. Why bathe and dress only to get all "het up" over the stove? No, she would dash off the pudding first. But the pudding just wouldn't jell. The more she stirred and the more fervently she prayed that all would be well with that pudding, the more the desired creaminess eluded her.

"What happened?" Marian told her. "They threw sand at me." Mother glared at the children across the street. "They did?" she observed, a threat in her voice. At this Marian began feeling sorry for herself; tears welled up in her eyes. "What else did they do?" mother prompted, as the child's manner suggested that there was more to tell. "And—and—" Marian stammered, "they pushed me!"

"They did!" There was something in mother's gesture as she eased her child onto the porch with a gentle, "Stay here," and swept down the steps, that spelled righteous indignation. The manner was grand.

The truth, however, was not in what Marian or mother thought. Those children across the way defined it better when they dispersed laughing and thumbing their noses at mother's approach. They were showing this mother the vanity and futility of her attitude. In her eyes Marian was above reproach.

When other children continually mistreat your child, it is not because they are horrid children taking unfair advantage of your own sweet, meek child. Rather it is because they don't like him. Marian is a tattletale, a despised person, because her mother is always ready to fight for her. One made the other.

"I just can't come and get you," she walked into the receiver. "What was that you said? I didn't just get it," came the voice.

"I just can't come." "What on earth's the matter—anything wrong?" came a startled voice.

"Nothings' wrong, but I've got to hang up," and she did. Back to the kitchen she rushed, only to find that fated pudding was was. Out to the garage, into the car, and off—she could not expect her husband to walk such a hot day and he oughtn't to take taxis.

A Familiar Story

What woman cannot finish this story? The apprehensive man, let down with a thud by her tale of something on the stove, the nervous woman ready to burst into tears because she was tired. And the way she looked! She hadn't stopped to take off the apron. Fortunately, it looked like a dress, but she had grabbed a hat because she knew her hair to be disheveled. She did look a fright.

Back she tore to the house and to the kitchen, having gathered up her somewhat bewildered man. There was the pudding. It had not yet passed a crisis of any sort. There was yet hope.

The pudding finally was saved, but not the day, for a hastily prepared dinner and a still more tasty toilet left our Mrs. Jones' nerves in a greater jangle. Thank heavens for an amiable husband! All the scolding was because she tried to do too much and should have bought something at the Women's Exchange instead of getting all steamed up over a cook stove.

"What a lovely looking pudding," said her friend the next day; "pity the milk turned sour." One of life's darkest moments, any woman will agree, and a first rate excuse for patronizing bakes.

Silly, these tales of woman's daily misadventures, but not so silly for a woman who is jittery after such experiences. Bring a tired man and a nervous woman together at the close of the day and only a miracle keeps them from quarreling.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "My fingernails are covered with ugly white spots. They are also brittle and inclined to snap off if I touch something by accident. My hands are otherwise good looking. Is there anything I can do to get rid of the spots and make my nails flexible?"

The white spots may be caused by slight bruises. Do you tap your nails against a table or your chair when you are impatient—or do you dig at your cuticles with a metal instrument? Either of these habits will injure the delicate matrix in which the nails grow and will cause white spots. The spots will grow out, and if you are extra careful of your hands fewer and fewer will develop until your nails are clear. You can overcome the brittleness by soaking the nails in warm olive oil or cuticle oil nightly.

JELLY-MAKING TIME

With berries reaching the height of their season and many kinds of fruit on the market, the thrifty housewife avails herself of this opportunity to put up a goodly supply of jellies and jams, so that her family may have a variety. In Miss Wilson's column tomorrow you will find recipes for several kinds.

12 REPORTED DROWNED IN TEXAS FLOOD

SAN ANTONIO, June 15.—Floods swept through southern Texas today, taking a heavy toll of life, causing great property damage and threatening a score of towns.

Austin, the state capital, was virtually isolated when the Colorado river rose to a stage of 41 feet. For hours the city was without electric power. Traffic over bridges to south Austin was suspended as the structures were in danger of being swept down stream.

12 ARE DEAD

Montopolis Bridge over the Colorado on the Austin-Bastrop highway was swept away.

The known death toll stood at 12 with a score of persons missing. Property damage will run into the hundreds of thousands. Torrential rains caused the flood.

At Italy, 40 miles northwest of Dallas, A. G. Mitchell, his wife and two daughters, 10, 9, and 8, were drowned when the bridge over the Colorado river was swept away.

Two negroes were drowned at Karnes City, southeast of San Antonio and at Del Rio, now cut off from communication, six Mexicans lost their lives and 12 others were missing.

The San Antonio river was a mile wide at Karnes City. The Texas river roared through floodable homes of Vice President Garner and carried several small buildings downstream. At the Rivers the Texas was three miles wide, and at La Grulla dam, where Corpus Christi's water supply is impounded, it tore in with such force there was great apprehension. The Brazos and Rio rivers also pour into this dam.

Conquering Heroes Hailed

Ruled Ineligible

AT LEFT is Edwin C. "Alabama" Pitts, all round star athlete of Sing Sing prison, New York, as he was met in Albany by Johnny Evers, baseball manager, after release on parole from sentence for a New York holdup. Signed by Evers, Judge W. C. Bramham, league president, ruled Pitts ineligible because of his criminal record.

-a word in edgewise; wise and otherwise

By I. M. WISE

of this sentiment has sprung the numerous "Edgewise" cases all over the land, a high tide in truth to the authors of our being.

We may be engaged scripturally to "thou shalt not kill," upon the head that the Lord our God avengeth us, but the commandment becomes a pleasure when we honor him through love, rather than through compulsion.

ASKS LITTLE

Dad, or father, is a pretty good sport after all. He tolerates and slaves for us without complaint, caters to our creature comforts and whims, and is the good old reliable "Edgewise" to which we turn. He asks no recompense or reward except affectionate regard, and through his own chance of viewpoint he recognizes the principle of youth and records the consideration he is now receiving in his later measure than ever before.

So today is his day in our scheme of things, and we pause to pay the homage that he has earned because of his realization that the real crown of parenthood is placed on the brow by "becoming as little children" and thus fulfilling the prophet's declaration that "the glory of children are their fathers."

FIRED BATTLE

The today night fighting in the south side, where the unionized stockyard and packing house labor is highly sympathetic with the striking team, was a repetition of a Thursday night battle, and Sheriff Hopkins feared there would be another outbreak tonight.

Hopkins with his extra deputies and the 230 police, ordered on 24 hour service, told Jurgensen they had exhausted every effort to keep the peace and demanded state intervention. They already had ordered the Omaha and Council Bluffs Railway Company not to operate cars into South Omaha after dark, but they doubt even this measure would insure peace.
